Describe present and historic physical appearance:

The Beckstrom Log House is rectangular, roughly 16 feet wide and 12 feet deep. It has a medium gabled wood shingle roof with no roof features. The cabin has the consistent features of an early settlers' cabin in the western Washington area. This consists of squared cedar logs with dovetail or Norwegian joints. Cracks are chinked. The gable ends are faced with horizontal shiplap siding. It is a one-story structure on wood blocks. The windows are double-hung with two panes of glass in each. Two windows flank the front door and one is centered on the east side of the cabin. The main door is made from vertical wood boards. There is no porch.

The Beckstrom Log Cabin was moved from its original location (the Beckstrom homestead off of what is now 100th Avenue NE just north of the present day St. Brendan's Catholic Church in Bothell at NE 195th St) in 1969 to the rear of 10222 Main Street and finally to the Park at Bothell Landing in 1978. It is presently located just south of the Bothell Historical Museum in the Park at Bothell Landing.

State significance of property, and justify criteria, criteria considerations, and areas and periods of significance noted above:

The Beckstrom Log Cabin takes its primary significance from its illustration of the earliest housing types and architectural styles during the settlement period of the Bothell area. Of almost equal importance is the family associated with the cabin. Andrew and Augusta Beckstrom came with Andrew’s father Olaf to Seattle in 1883 and built their cabin in 1885. Their son John was the first white birth recorded in the area.

Andrew was a native of Smoland, Sweden, born on June 29, 1852, the son of Olaf and Anna Beckstrom. He learned the painter’s trade and when he was 18 left for America. He worked from about a year in the Chicago area and studied at night school and took courses at a business college. In 1871 he moved to Topeka, Kansas where he met and married Augusta Nelson in 1879. She was the daughter of Andrew and Christina (Pierson) Nelson and her family came to America in 1868. Andrew and Augusta had 16 children. They were: Francis (1880), Anna (1881), Carl (1883), John (1885), Ulrich (1887), Selma (1889), Inga (1890), Julia (1892), Nina (1893), Tina (1895), Elva (1897), Stella (1899), Albert (1901), Rudolph (1903), Theodore (1905), and Bror (1907). Andrew died on October 12, 1926. Andrew’s father Olaf died in 1895 and is buried in the Bothell Pioneer Cemetery.

While in Topeka, Andrew became friends with Peter John Quartman. The two men were interested in migrating to the Northwest and in 1883 a party of the Beckstrom’s (with children Anna and Carl and grandfather Olaf Beckstrom) and the Quartmans arrived in Seattle. They had become part of a migration train to San Francisco, setting up housekeeping in a train box car for the journey from Kansas to San Francisco.

From San Francisco they caught a boat to Seattle and arrived on April 29, 1883. For a time, Andrew and Peter worked in Seattle, but in May 1883, they filed a preemption claim at what is now Bothell. There were no established roads to the area and the closest mail delivery was made to Woodinville by steamboat. A rowboat was purchased and a small sail was added for the trip up-river. Cargo had to be kept to a minimum of necessities, such as tools, firearms, clothing, bedding, a stove, kitchen utensils and a sewing machine. The family was allowed to occupy a cabin once used by lumbermen until they built this, their own cabin in 1885. Crude furniture was made from shakes split from the timber. Land had to be cleared and crops planted. Bear and deer were thankfully plentiful. Grandfather Beckstrom assumed charge of the planting. Andrew sought outside work traveling as much as 30 miles one-way. During the first year the rowboat was the only means of transportation, but it was soon stolen.

Mrs. Beckstrom became the acknowledged nurse and doctor to the district which was long without a private physician. Her knowledge was derived from an old family book of medical information which was supplemented by her experience and common sense. She was considered particularly skillful at setting broken bones and tying off severed arteries in addition to caring for her garden and her growing brood of children.

The Beckstroms made important contributions to the early settlement and development of Bothell through clearing the land and establishing a way of life and set examples of courage and enterprise which are represented here by the family cabin.
